INTERIOR DEPARTMENT HONORS SIXTEEN FOR VALOR AND EIGHTY-NINE FOR OUTSTANDING SERVICE

"To us, bureaucracy is synonymous with service, with honesty, with a dollar return for every taxpayer's dollar invested in our present and our future," Secretary Udall said. "I applaud our leading political scientists who use bureaucracy consistently as a word truly descriptive of good government. They recognize that if it were not for modern bureaucracy our system of government would fail."

Following are those who received the Department's Valor Award:

Alexander Galanin and Alexay Merculief, Bureau of Commercial Fisheries employees on St. George Island, Alaska, for participating in a search-and-rescue effort for two men trapped on the Bering Sea Coast March 31, 1963;

Wesley D. Clarence and Allen E. Landry, Bureau of Indian Affairs employees at Tuba City, Ariz., for attempting to save the lives of two children who had fallen through the ice January 22, 1963;

George L. Presley, a Bureau of Land Management employee at Gooding, Idaho, for rescuing two men from a crashed helicopter August 3, 1963;

Gordon Haber, National Park Service employee from Atlantic Mine, Mich., for saving a fellow employee from accidental electrocution August 23, 1964;

Richard M. Leonard, Bureau of Indian Affairs employee, Billings, Mont., for saving the life of a child in an automobile fire at a service station August 16, 1964;

Raymond E. Akard, Bureau of Indian Affairs employee at Albuquerque, N. Mex., who was fatally burned while rescuing a fellow employee from a gasoline fire May 22, 1963;

Ronald R. Lowery, William H. Barstow, Jack G. Croeni, Laurance L. Oden, and Colin J. Sandwith, all employees of the Bureau of Mines Metallurgy Research Center, Albany, Oreg., for their roles in rescuing Haruo Kato, a fellow employee, from drowning off the Oregon coast September 13, 1964;

Merechildo Y. Ybarra, an employee of the National Park Service, at Big Bend National Park, Texas, for saving the life of a youth pinned in an overturned truck August 27, 1964;

Gerald L. Gardner, a Geological Survey employee at Coulee City, Wash., for rescuing an injured pilot from a wrecked helicopter and for giving first aid to an injured passenger July 27, 1963;

Donald P. Schlick, a Bureau of Mines engineer from Wheeling, W. Va., for participating in the rescue of three trapped miners in Pakistan January 29, 1964, while on assignment with the Agency for International Development.
